“ It was always special to see Erv at worship. He and I commiserated about limited mobility, but through it all, he was cheerful and optimistic. He gave the best hugs, always expecting one when I saw him. I remember his working at fish dinner, building the conveyor belt, unloading the fish, working in the kitchen, and then deep cleaning the day after. I like to think he is enjoying a fish dinner right now, and walking and running easily and without pain. I will miss him.
